“Management for Control Tuberculosis in Pandemic Covid-19”
Jakarta, July 29th – 30th 2021

CHAPTER I

INRODUCTION

A. Background

Tuberculosis is still a problem in some countries, including Indonesia. There is a tendency to increase cases of tuberculosis in some countries. By mid-March 2021, 84 countries with more than 80% of global TB incidence and almost 90% of global TB notifications in 2019 had reported complete monthly or quarterly data for 2020. These showed a 21% drop in TB notifications between 2019 and 2020 overalls, with much larger reductions in some high TB burden countries, notably India, Indonesia, the Philippines and South Africa.

Currently Indonesia is facing several pandemics that have an impact on the social and economic life of Indonesian people, two of which are tuberculosis and Covid-19. Tuberculosis disease has long been designated as a pandemic, not long ago the World Health Organization or WHO has also designated that one of the corona virus diseases or Covid-19 families as pandemic. This status is established following the impact of the disease not only on health but also to various sectors. Many interventions have been made in the context of Covid-19 prevention including large-scale social restrictions, vaccination, and others.

People with Covid-19 and tuberculosis show the same symptoms as cough, fever, and difficulty breathing. Both diseases mainly attack the lungs. Although both biological agents (Bacteria for Tuberculosis, Virus for Covid-19) are transmitted through close contact, the incubation period of tuberculosis disease has a slower onset than Covid-19 which is so far known to have an incubation period of up to 14 days.

Although these two infectious diseases are spread due to close contact, the ways of transmission are both different so there will be differences in infection control measures to control these two diseases. Tuberculosis bacteria float in the air in droplets for several hours after tuberculosis patients cough, sneeze, scream, or sing and the person who inhales them can become infected. The size of these droplets is a key factor that determines the infectious power of tuberculosis disease, the concentration of bacteria can be reduced by ventilation and direct sun exposure.

Covid-19 transmission is especially common when a person inhales droplets released by a person with Covid-19, including individuals who have not clear clinical symptoms. Droplets from coughing, sneezing, exhaling and talking can stick to the surface and contact is easily infected if they then touch the eyes, nose, or mouth. Hand washing is a very important measure in the prevention and control of Covid-19. Procedures in hospitals that produce aerosols also have the potential to infect people who carry out such procedures so that they should only be performed if using personal safety equipment as recommended.

Faculty of Public Health University of Muhammadiyah Jakarta in collaboration with IAKMI DKI Jakarta and the Faculty of Medicine and Health University of Muhammadiyah Jakarta held the Muhammadiyah International Public Health and Medicine (MIPHMC). MIPHMC is a large event that brings together health experts and medical experts in order to discuss to find smart solutions to combat tuberculosis in the Covid-19 pandemic.

1st MUHAMMADIYAH INTERNATIONAL PUBLIC HEALTH AND MEDICINE CONFERENCE (MIPHMC)

“Management for Control Tuberculosis in Pandemic Covid-19”
Jakarta, July 29th – 30th 2021

Opening Remarks of Rector of University of Muhammadiyah Jakarta

Assalamu’alaikum warahmatullahi wabarakatuh.

Firstly, I would like to thank the Faculty of Public Health University of Muhammadiyah Jakarta in collaboration with Faculty of Medicine and Health, University of Muhammadiyah Jakarta and Indonesia Public Health Association Jakarta Region for organizing this important event. I hope that this conference can become an annual event. Amin.

Dear attendees,

Let me first welcome you to the University of Muhammadiyah Jakarta and also to the “First Muhammadiyah International Public Health and Medicine Conference” with topic “Management for Tuberculosis Control During COVID-19 Pandemic”. Allow me, in this context, to thank each and every one of you here, from different countries, in this virtual conference today.

Ladies and gentlemen,

The Covid-19 is considered among global events that have caused major changes to the world since the end of the second world war. By the end of 2020, this virus has infected more than 60 million people globally and has killed 1.5 million of them. The virus has led to fundamental changes in various areas such as health, social, economic, and political as well as posing new challenges for the future of global humanity.

in line with the statement of the dean of Faculty of Public Health, tuberculosis control during covid-19 pandemic may be affected. Management for tuberculosis treatment must be continued in line with the management of Covid-19 pandemic.

Ladies and gentlemen,

University of Muhammadiyah Jakarta has proven its strong international orientation by organising this conference. This is also shown in the attention to the practical details of international mobility. Once again, a well-deserved compliment for our host.

I would like to close my address with those words. And I wish you all an educational and fruitful conference.

Thank you for your attention.

1st MUHAMMADIYAH INTERNATIONAL
PUBLIC HEALTH AND MEDICINE CONFERENCE
(MIPHMC)

“Management for Control Tuberculosis in Pandemic Covid-19”
Jakarta, July 29th – 30th 2021

Opening Remark of Dean of Faculty of Public Health University of Muhammadiyah Jakarta

Allow me in this opportunity to welcome to all of these conference participants by thanking and praising to the Almighty God for all His blessings, grace, and mercies, that have let us gather in this conference, in excellent condition and health.

The topic of this conference is: “Management for Tuberculosis Control During COVID-19 Pandemic”, which held by Faculty of Public Health University of Muhammadiyah Jakarta in collaborating with Faculty of Medicine and Health University of Muhammadiyah Jakarta and Indonesia Public Health Association Jakarta Region.

Tuberculosis continues to be the biggest infectious disease killer on a global scale, accounting 1.4 million fatalities in 2019. This precarious condition may be further aggravated by the COVID-19 pandemic and associated actions. Glaziou's modelling study issued a stern warning that a reduction in tuberculosis case detection induced by COVID-19 in 2020 could result in a major rise in tuberculosis deaths, bringing us back to the level of tuberculosis mortality in 2015.

As the world mobilizes to tackle the COVID-19 pandemic, it is critical to guarantee that critical services and operations for addressing long-standing health problems continue to protect people living with tuberculosis and other diseases or health conditions. Health services, especially national tuberculosis programs, must take a proactive role in ensuring an effective and timely response to COVID-19.

The conferences like this can provide a valuable opportunity for research scientists, industry specialists and decision-makers to share the experience. I am grateful to the experts who have come to share their knowledge in this conference. I also welcome to the representatives of governments, industrial associations and NGO who has joined us.

I am sure you will have fruitful and rewarding exchanges both today and tomorrow. I hope we get success in this important conference and I look forward to learning about the outcome.

Thank you.
